Detailed characteristics of the vacancy:

Special Teaching, Research or Outreach program:

This program aims at the development and expansion of the triad Teaching-Research-Extension in the area of Philosophy, subarea Teaching Practices in Philosophy, through the hiring of a visiting professor with training in the area. The objectives of this program are the following:

- Strengthen the current research groups and form new research groups in the subarea of Teaching Practices in Philosophy;
- Establish collaborations with researchers from other teaching and research institutions (national or international) in order to broaden the scientific exchange on themes related to Philosophy Teaching Practice.
- Improve the disciplines and teaching programs of the disciplines on Teaching Practice in Philosophy (considering the three (3) practices offered by the degree course in Philosophy dedicated to methodology, curriculum and programs, as well as the internships offered by the course - with special emphasis on the Internship module in CH VII, the field of technologies) offered by the Degree in Philosophy and by the Interdisciplinary Degrees (LCH and LCNE), as well as disciplines in the Professional Master's Degree in Philosophy (PROF-Philosophy) and in the Postgraduate Degree in Philosophy (Master's and Doctorate).
- To strengthen already existing extension or cultural activities and develop new extension and cultural activities related to the subarea of Teaching Practices in Philosophy, through the experience and knowledge of the visiting professor.

Considering the objectives of the special program of teaching, research and extension above, the visiting professor will work in the triad Teaching-Research-Extension in the area of Public Policy at UFABC, as follows:

TEACHING: The visiting professor will contribute to the practical improvement of the teaching programs of UFABC's disciplines in the subarea of Teaching Practices in Philosophy. Thus, in the Undergraduate Degree in Philosophy, the visiting professor will teach undergraduate courses, according to academic affinity and the needs of the course: "Teaching Practice" (in its 3 components: methodologies, curriculum, and programs), as well as in the internships planned for the Degree in Philosophy, sometimes shared with the Degree in Humanities and related disciplines of limited option of the Degree in Humanities.

RESEARCH: The visiting professor will work in disciplines of the Graduate programs at UFABC, participate in research activities in collaboration with groups already established at the University, implement new lines of research and orient or co-supervise undergraduate, undergraduate and/or graduate students. Among UFABC's Post-Graduation programs, he will work in the Post-Graduation in Philosophy and in the Professional Master's in Philosophy (PROF-Philosophy).

EXTENSION: It will assist the Degree in Philosophy course in the creation and performance in extension projects, aiming at the development of cooperation with the continuous and initial formation of basic education teachers and allowing the students the contact with theoretical and practical aspects of philosophy and humanities teaching.
